Year 6 have thoroughly immersed themselves into our new learning about why we should remember and The Christmas Truce. They collaborated brilliantly to perform John McCrae's beautiful poem, 'In Flanders' Fields' and were impressively creative in crafting their poetic reply. Collaborating again, they produced a fantastic poppy art installation in tribute and have also produced individual mixed media WW1 paintings on canvasses.

Our Year 6 pupils were a joy to take to the military museum, where staff commented on their enthusiasm and good learning behaviours.

In maths, we have begun our mammoth learning journey on fractions and are making really good progress into learning about the four operations and fractions.

We continue to expand our learning about electricity and circuits in science. What a half term so far! Well done Year 6.
