Over the past few weeks, the children have been working incredibly hard and have shown great enthusiasm across the curriculum.

In Science, we have explored states of matter through a range of exciting investigations. The children enjoyed carrying out experiments to test reversible and irreversible changes, as well as identifying soluble and insoluble substances.

In English, we have loved reading Millions and used it to inspire our learning, including writing and following instructions for making lasagne. The children were especially excited to taste some lasagne themselves! We have also begun our new English stimulus, Dreamgiver, and the children have fully immersed themselves in the story and its themes.

In History, the children have been engaged and thoughtful as they explored how punishments were used in the past to deter crime. They considered whether these punishments were effective and compared them with systems used today. We are very proud of their enthusiasm, curiosity and positive attitude to learning.
